Hello, everyone. I am Vicente Reynal, CEO of Gardner Denver. I'm very excited that Gardner Denver and Ingersoll Rand Industrial Segment have agreed to join forces to create a global leader in mission critical flow creation and industrial technologies.

We have admired Ingersoll Rand's Industrial Segment for a long time. You have built a great portfolio of brands, products and service solutions. And a culture that you should be very proud of. So this is why we're so thrilled to work together with you to create a stronger company.

For more than 150 years, Gardner Denver has been a global leader in mission critical flow creation and industrial technologies.

Our focus is on developing engineered solutions at the core of our customer needs, particularly around increasing efficiencies and lowering energy expenditures.

Both Gardner Denver and Ingersoll Rand embraces the similar culture values of talent development, employee engagement, operational excellence and high levels of integrity. And we truly believe that these common shared values will ensure a smooth transition and an integration into the new company.

What we also believe is unique to us is that we truly believe that employees are at their best when they have a sense of ownership and a mentality of being owners in the company. With that in mind, we awarded equity to all employees of Gardner Denver at the time of the IPO. In keeping with that spirit, we intend to award equity to employees of the newly formed company once the transaction closes. We truly believe this is going to accelerate how we engage our employees and performance of this newly created company.

Ingersoll Rand Industrial Segment employees, all of you have been instrumental in building the great company that you have today. It's truly an exciting time to bring our teams together. The amount of talent across our companies, it's instrument for our future success. And I'm looking forward to meeting many of you as I go across many of the locations of Ingersoll Rand Industrial Segment through the next months and weeks and get a chance to see firsthand how you take care of the customer and how you drive the performance in your business. It's going to be a great journey ahead of us. And I'm looking forward to be hand in hand, working with you on our future.
