MATERIAL INFORMATION

Avianca Holdings S.A. (“Avianca” or the “Company”) would like to clarify that:

- Oceanair Linhas Aéreas S.A. (“Oceanair”) and Avian Líneas Aéreas S.A. (“Avian”) are separate entities independent from Avianca, with separate management teams, administration, operations and financial statements.
- Oceanair and Avian are licensed to use the trademark “Avianca” under separate trademark licensing agreements entered into by Aerovías del Continente Americano Avianca S.A. and Oceanair in 2009, and by Aerovías del Continente Americano Avianca S.A. and Avian in 2016, respectively.
- The due diligence process previously in place regarding a potential integration of Avianca Holdings S.A. with Oceanair has been suspended for a substantial amount of time and will remain postponed indefinitely.
- The Company currently intends to phase out its Embraer fleet in accordance with its long-term fleet plan. Ten Embraer-190 aircraft are proposed to be phased out from Avianca’s fleet. A related $38.9 million one-time non-cash impairment charge for these assets is reflected in Avianca’s 2018 fourth quarter results, representing the estimated residual value of the entire Embraer-190 fleet.
- Avianca has appointed three global investment banks to work with the Company to actively manage Avianca’s outstanding liabilities due 2020.
- Avianca has implemented an internal transformation process, migrating Avianca from a growth-oriented to a profitability-focused business model. The transformation process is driven by six key levers: (1) adjusted fleet plan that is expected to decrease growth rate; (2) enhancement of operational efficiency; (3) divestiture of certain non-core assets; (4) strengthening of operating profits; (5) strengthening of capital structure; and (6) re-prioritization of CapEx investments. Avianca has retained Seabury Consulting, which offers expertise specific to the aviation industry, to assist with the implementation of the planned transformation.
- Gerardo Grajales will be leading the Company’s transformation process in his new role as Chief Transformation Officer.
- In addition to the information reported on June 19, 2018, regarding the incorporation of the company Regional Express América S.A.S. (“Regional Express América”), Avianca informs that Regional Express América is currently in process of obtaining technical certification by Colombian Civil Aviation Authority. Regional Express América expects to begin its operations next March, once it obtains corresponding government approvals.
