Sunrun Employees Video Transcript

Audience: Sunrun and Vivint Solar Employees

LYNN JURICH:

Hello to all the Sunrun employees and Vivint Solar employees watching this video. My name is Lynn Jurich and I'm the co-Founder and CEO of Sunrun, the nation's leading solar, battery, and energy services company. On the call with me today are Sunrun's Executive Chairman, Ed Fenster, and David Bywater, the CEO of Vivint Solar, another leading solar and battery provider.

You may have seen in the press release and internal emails that today an agreement was reached for Sunrun to acquire Vivint.

We have big ambitions for what we can accomplish together. This will bring access to clean energy to more families and more households. Together, as a combined company, we can also use our shared knowledge and resources to improve our cost structure, to develop new products and services, and to expand access to clean solar and battery power.

While our companies together already have 500,000 customers, we are just scratching the surface. In the US, only 3% of households have solar power, and yet 9 out of 10 people say they favor more solar energy.

We've been incredibly impressed with David and the team. The quality of the installation, the quality of the sales practices, and Vivint Solar's direct-to-home sales model is a perfect complement to Sunrun's sales channels. Together we are going to be able to reach more customers and spread the word of affordable, clean home solar and batteries.

I'd like to close with a huge thanks to our committed and hardworking Sunrun employees, and our excitement in welcoming the Vivint Solar team. Together as a combined company, we are committed to offering the best employee benefits and the best career opportunities. And we will be the best place to work in the solar industry. That also means we're going to re-double our efforts to have a diverse and inclusive workforce. We want all of our employees—new and old—to belong.

Thank you very much. And with that, I'll turn it over to David Bywater.

DAVID BYWATER:

Thank you, Lynn, for the introduction. As Lynn stated, I'm David Bywater, the chief executive officer of Vivint Solar. Lynn, Ed and I have had the chance to get to know each other quite well throughout this process, and I couldn't be more excited about their leadership in the industry and today's announcement. From the beginning of our conversations it was clear to us that we shared a strong vision of what solar can do for families across the country. Expanding access to home solar and batteries not only creates a better today, but a much better tomorrow. At Vivint Solar we envisioned a world powered by 100% clean energy, and have made it our mission to bring clean energy solutions to every home. Combining the strengths of Sunrun and Vivint Solar is truly a transformational opportunity. Combined, we will be able to bring solar and batteries to more homes, further delight customers, provide increased value to the grid, gain skill, and accelerate innovative solutions. My sincere thanks go out to everyone at Vivint Solar for all you have done to make our company great. I know greater things are in store and can't wait to see what we, at Sunrun and Vivint Solar, accomplish together.

Ed...

EDWARD FENSTER:

Thanks, David. I'm Ed Fenster, Sunrun's co-Founder and Executive Chairman. Like Lynn and David, I am so excited to join you all on this journey.

We have such an enormous opportunity working together to make a bigger impact for our customers and for society.

As Lynn mentioned, we're going to come out of the gate with half of a million customers. That already makes us the third largest owner of solar in the country and—at our combined growth rate—we have a clear path to being number one. We are going to be able to raise capital more efficiently. We're going to be able to offer better, more affordable products and services for our customers, and, with more customers and a lower cost structure we'll be able to make a big impact shaping the future of this electric system, ensuring that it is renewable, smart, and distributed.

We are going to expand Brightbox to our existing customers. We're going to grow our network of batteries to benefit not only our customers, but also the grid. Making clean renewable power and storing it where it's consumed is going to save billions in costs and expedite the retirement of dirty, centralized fossil fuel plants. With our combined resources we are going to make enormous progress against a challenge so big that many people give up and feel it's intractable.

And so, to each one of you I wanted to say, "thank you." You are making the world a better place. And with Sunrun and Vivint locking arms, we're going to achieve our goal of powering this planet by the sun.

Thank you.

The inclusion of projections in this filing should not be regarded as an indication that Sunrun and Vivint Solar, or their representatives, considered or consider the projections to be a reliable prediction of future events.
