Caution Concerning Forward-Looking Statements

This current report on Form 8-K contains forward-looking statements as that term is used in the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. These statements are based on our current expectations about future events or future financial performance. Forward-looking statements by their nature address matters that are, to different degrees, uncertain, and often contain words such as "may," "could," "expect," "intend," "plan," "seek," "anticipate," "believe," "estimate," "predict," "potential," or "continue." These statements involve known and unknown risks and uncertainties that may cause the events we discuss not to occur or to differ significantly from what we expect. For us, these risks and uncertainties include, among others, general industry conditions and competition, including the current global financial crisis that began in 2007; the impact of market volatility on revenue from asset-based fees; damage to our reputation resulting from claims made about possible conflicts of interest; liability for any losses that result from an actual or claimed breach of our fiduciary duties; financial services industry consolidation; a prolonged outage of our database and network facilities; challenges faced by our non-U.S. operations; and the availability of free or low-cost investment information.

A more complete description of these risks and uncertainties can be found in our Annual Report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2008. If any of these risks and uncertainties materialize, our actual future results may vary significantly from what we expected. We do not undertake to update our forward-looking statements as a result of new information or future events.

- 1. Moody's, Standard & Poor's, and Fitch Ratings may have to provide increased disclosures and greater accountability for debt analyses following their performances with troubled mortgage securities. The SEC is planning to propose that companies disclose the grades they received on bonds while shopping among ratings agencies, while the agencies may be required to disclose revenue from their biggest clients and could face increased lawsuits from investors. Does any of this information provide an impetus for Morningstar to want to actively seek a role in the credit rating area?*

Yes, we've said we would consider providing credit ratings, and it's something we're continuing to evaluate. As with other potential new entrants, though, we have to weigh the opportunities against regulatory and other costs. As we look at any possible opportunity, our goal is to help investors make better decisions. Apart from credit ratings, we're also looking for ways to strengthen our fixed-income analytical abilities to better serve our clients.
